Twenty young ladies and ten young nen last night received diplomas of the Scranton high school. They are Ber-nice C. Conger, Emma C. Harte, Alice A. Hire, Irene Kann, Elsie K. Keller, Amelia S. Koch, Edna S. Klauminzer, Katherine Larkin, Mabel Mallery, Agnes L. Nichol, Myrtle O. Perry, Ethel L. the rate of fare is 75 cents and a sacred Porter, Elizabeth M. Robinson, Martha Reese, Lulu Sylvester, Kathryn M. Smithing, Maude O. Saunders, Jennie M. Thomas, Lida Lee Weaver, Luiu Bell Warren, Howard P. Davis, Fred M. Evans, Charles Falkowswy, jr., Edwin W. Guernsey, Joseph Murphy, John M. McCourt, Simon L. Nye, Arthur Phillips, Joseph A, Wagner and Harold Ar-ist club, of Wilkes-Barre. The train will stop at all the stations along the thur Watres. Those accredited with the honors in scholarship are Alice A. Hire, Irene Kann, Amelia S. Koch, Elizabeth M. Robinson, Jennie M. Thomas, Lulu Sylvester, Lida Lee Weaver, Charles Faltowsky, jr., Arthur Phillips and Harold Arthur Watres.

The Frothingham could scarcely hold those who were attracted by the commencement exercises. Despite the warmth of the night the theater was not uncomfortable, owing to its excellent system of ventilation, and the au-dience was pleasurably disappointed, for it was the general expectation that the place was going to be insufferably close. It was well that there was nothing to detract from the pleasure of the occasion, for it was certainly most interesting. It was an audience that would not have required much to hold its atention, as the majority of those present were friends of one or the other of the graduates, but had there been no such bond of sympathy it would have been just the same, as the exercises in themselves were sufficient to hold rapt attention.

DECORATIONS OF THE HOUSE. When the curtain went up it dislosed a wood scene in which the art of the stage hands was heightened by the work of Clark who had tastefully arranged a fringe of palms and other greens about the edge of the stage, the artificial and natural decorations blending quite harmoniously. The undergraduates were seated in tiers back of the two rows of chairs reserved for the graduates, who, after a march had struck up, came from either side of the last wing met in the center and walked in two's down the steps to the front where they separated, one going to one side of the stage and the other to the opposite side. All were seated at a given signal, then the exercises were formally opened with an invocation by Rev. C. E. Robinson, D. D., of the Sec-Prebyterian church.

Under the direction of Professor C. B. Derman the school, which numbered about 100 voices, sang "The Lord is Great" evidencing in this as in the songs which followed excellent training and good voice.
Harold Watres, son of ex-Lieutenans

Governor Watres, was the salutatorian. After a graceful welcome to the audience he embarked on a discussion of "Abraham Lincoln as a Scholar," in which he showed himself to be a promising talker and a painstaking student. He argued that notwithstanding the other, on which latter matter the laws fact that Lincoln virtually never had any book learning and said himself that he was no scholar, he was a great scholar as achievements in statesmanship go to show and although he often spelled word wrong he was a brighter man than any who have ever written a spelling book. The most entertaining musical number of the evening was the second chorus, "Hark, Hear The Billows Roar," in which Miss Irene Kann, the possessor of a sweet and perfectly controlled soprano voice sustained the solo covered later in the evening by Sol Goldsmith, one of the firm. The amount Miss Lida Weaver was the first of the three essayists. Her subject was the guite novel one, "Superstitions," and she treated it in a manner that betokened thorough reading and in a simple yet very interesting style.

In the recitation "The Romance of a Swan's nest," Miss Kann displayed elocutionary ability that was quite on a par with her vocalism. Her exceptionally easy stage presence was one of the most refreshing features of the evening's programme.

After the school had sung "The Bridal Chorus," Miss Jennie Thomas read the second essay, "Must the Classics Go," in which she tritely reviewed the familiar pro and con arguments on the nuch discussed question and then cleverly advanced some original arguments in favor of the classics, which won for her hearty and continued applause.

The first part of the programme was closed with a humorous recitation, 'Noah Webster's Works," by Charles Falkowsky, who evidenced a proper conception of humorous declamation.

In the second overture Bauer's orchestra was tendered an encore, which was a deserved recognition of the part which it had contributel to the evening's enjoyment both in the accompaniments and separate selections. The final essay of the programme, "Have We an Aristocracy?" by Miss Amelia Koch, seemed to meet with more favor from the audience than any number which preceded or followed it. It was a scholarly study of a most interesting theme, couched in elegant diction and delivered in a manner which held the closest attention of the audience from beginning to end. After the chorus, "The Revel of the Leaves," Miss Bernice Conger recited "The Schoolmasters Guest," a humorous recitation with "country" dialect. She was compelled to bow acknowledg ments to a hearty encore. The chorus, "Blow, Soft Winds," for female voices, was next rendered and then Arthur Phillips delivered an oration on "Great Things Have Small Be ginnings," which was eloquently done and won for the young orator a round of applause which did not cease for some time after he bowed his acknowledgments.

THE CLASS PROPHECY.

"High School Bells" was the next seection by the school. It was followed with the class prophecy by Joseph Wagner. By combining the pleasant jibes on his classmates with well put local hits he managed to keep both the class and the audience equally interested. He had to twice bow his acknowledgments before the audience would allow him to take his seat.

The valedictory was delivered by Miss Lulu Sylvester who prefaced her farewells with a scholarly dissertation on music, her deductions being drawn from the theme, "The Turning of Or-pheus." She contended that intellectuality is necessary to the true music-

President George Mitchell, of the board of control, then presented the diplomas, indulging in a short and hapy speech in which he took occasion to commend the Scranton training school to those who intended to follow the profession of teaching, and urged the audience to continue the interest which they, the Board of Control -- Professor by their presence, evidenced in the welfare of the Scranton schools.

Principal J. C. Lange, for the high school teacheds, bade farewell to the class of '96, giving them as a message the sentiment contained in their motto, "To Thine Own Self be True," and also some other good and timely advice.

The exercises concluded with chorus, "Fairyland Waltz," after which the flowers and presents, which friends had sent to the stage, were distributed.

Music was rendered by F. E. Bond, and Messrs. Ayres, Williams, Beardsley, and Whittemore, The commencement exercises were held yesterday morning. Harry Warren Mumford delivered the salutatory oration. His subject was "The Power of Public Opinion in the United States. Charles E. Bunnell spoke on "Unwritten Laws," and Joseph C. Lappens on "Christendom Transformed." three gentlemen won high praise for the excellence of their efforts. An esay on Rosa Bonheur was read by Miss Jennie Alavene Reynolds.

John M. Sayles spoke on "Martyrs of Faith"; John B. Tiffany's subject was "Progress' Westward Trend;" and John Walter's subject was "Causes and Efvaledictory oration was delivered by Howard Arnold Swallow, His subject was "The Influence of Conservatism upon the Progress of Civilization." This was followed by the presentation of diplomas and the awarding of prizes. At 12:30 dinner was served.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the students and faculty gathered together to hear Rev. J. M. Stiffler, D. D., of Crozier Theological seminary on the subject, "Helps in Reading." His address was a masterly and scholarly one.

At 8 o'clock in the evening the public exercises of the Alumni -association were held, and at 9 o'clock the banquet was entered upon. It was one of the most successful commencements in the history of the neademy.
